PRODUCTS OF OLD HOME TOWN

[Machinery]

Do you remember the lazy fellow who used to sit around in the implement store and the barber shops in the old home town and predict the failure of every boy who tried to poke his nose above the common herd?

Up in the village of Salem they used to crack jokes at the expense of a lank and ungainly young fellow who clerked in the village grocery, poled flatboats on the river and split rails for a living. They called him Abe in those days. He became the President of the United States and thousands from far places on the earth have visited his tomb at Springfield to do him honor. They used to make fun of Bill McAdoo back in the home town. Of course, you've heard of Bill. He dug a tunnel under the Hudson River and is the Secretary of the Treasury now. But there are a lot of old tads back in the old home town who sort of hope that Bill will fall over something yet and land in the common grave. And Orville Wright was a regular joke in his old town. It is the old home town itself that is the joke.

FORTUNATE AMERICAN BOYS

Within a few weeks a small army of American young men will be marching upon the American educational institutions. They will be armed with text books and note books, pen and pencil, crucible and retort, T-square and compasses, microscope and telescope, hopefulness and energy fall and winter campaign, and by the time another summer has come they will have been victorious. Only a few will fail by the wayside.

In Europe the young men who would and should go to college are going to war. Instead of preparing themselves for useful citizenship they are electing themselves to useless graves. Instead of being constructive for a long lifetime they are to be destructive for a few days and then destroyed.

It is one obvious contrast to indicate the good fortune of those who today are Americans. They are saving themselves, which is good; and they are preparing to benefit the generations of the future, which is better. They are sane men, living sane, living according to the will of Providence and the dictates of science and common sense.

LIFE IN ALASKA

[Hartford Courant.]

One of the things that people cannot appreciate who live in a climate like no matter how beautiful it is, is that peculiarity of glacial countries whereby floods come in the hottest and driest weather. The extreme heat melts the "perpetual snows" and the rivers rise though the land is parched.

A special dispatch from Juneau, Alaska, to the Seattle Post-Intelligencer says that in the unprecedented heat the streams are floods and carrying away their bridges, but it gives this comfortable account of what the people are doing. It says: "Cabin residents are towing small ice-barges in the bay from Taku glacier to their cabins for relief from the heat."

Baggage by Parcel Post

A lady in town had two suit cases with which she proposed to do a little traveling, but considering that two were too many for her to handle, she took one to the parcel post and mailed it to her destination; It cost just 27 cents to do this; so she started off gaily with one suit case and will get the other at the place where she was going. That 27 cents was well invested. It relieved her of much trouble. Two suit cases are too cumbersome for a man to carry, much less for a woman. It was worth twice the postage to get rid of one of them. As a rule people don't make the most of the parcel post, and this little incident may prove an eye opener. Send your baggage by mail; that's the way to do it.—Ohio State Journal.

For lame back use Hanford's Balm, applied thoroughly and well rubbed in.

DID NOT EAT POIRK

A prominent rabbi riding in a crowded street car arose to offer a seat to a lady who was standing, but before the lady could reach the seat a man appropriated it unto himself. For a few moments he sat in blissful contentment, then, looking up, he met the scornful gaze of the rabbi, and said: "You look as though you would like to eat me."

"No," replied the rabbi, "I couldn't do that. I am a Jew."
